IN THE LAW SCHOOLS

Four faculty members at The John Marshall Law School recently participated in the Global Legal Skills Conference, which was held earlier this month in San Jose, Costa Rica.

Professor Mark E. Wojcik chaired the conference and spoke at the plenary session. Professor Lurene M. Contento talked about "Teaching ESL/EFL Students More Effectively: How Should We Teach Students and Lawyers About Cultural Preferences?"

Anne Abramson, the school's international and foreign law librarian, spoke about an international law research course she developed and Professor Shahram Dana served on a panel discussion about international courts.
