IN THE LAW SCHOOLS

Professor Daryl Lim of The John Marshall Law School serves as a co-consultant to the American Antitrust Institute on its amicus brief to the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Vernon Hugh Bowman v. Monsanto Co.

In the case, an Indiana farmer faces a patent infringement suit.

This case raises issues involving the post-sale rights of patent owners and could affect the way agricultural and biotechnology industries operate.

Lim, an intellectual property law professor, was invited to consult on the brief.

He wrote an article for the American Bar Association — “Rebooting the Bean” — which discusses the case.
