

Chicago Daily Law Bulletin®

Volume 159, No. 223

IN THE NEWS

IN THE LAW SCHOOLS

Three students representing The John Marshall Law School were deemed the most professional and competent when they competed in St. John's University's Securities Dispute Resolution Triathlon.

The Advocate's Choice Award, given in recognition of the team with the highest degree of skill, competence and professionalism was presented to Lauren Rankins, Alexis Pool and Danielle Young. The award was one of five presented at the competition Oct. 19 and 20 in Queens, N.Y.

The competition gave students the opportunity to integrate skills in negotiation, mediation and arbitration into client representation of a Financial Industry Regulatory Authority issue.

The students were coached by attorneys Roger MacDougall and James O'Connor through John Marshall's Center for Advocacy and Dispute Resolution.