The John Marshall Law School professor Ann M. Lousin received an Award of Merit from the Illinois State Historical Society for one of her “Law and Public Issues” columns in the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin.

Lousin was recognized for “Four who believed in the constitution,” in which she paid tribute to four Illinoisans who championed the study of the Illinois Constitution, helped draft parts of it, wrote about it and tried to use it to make Illinois a better place to live.

This is the third year in a row that her Daily Law Bulletin columns have been honored by ISHS.
